Mr. Hawkins, the headmaster, stopped Anna one day at the school gate.

“Now,” he said, “I want you to tell me the 1, my dear.” Feeling something terrible had happened, Anna said slowly, “2.”

“I have had a most 3 accusation(投诉) made against you by Mrs. Bond.”

“Mrs. Bond?” said Anna, not understanding. Janet Bond was a quiet little 4 of a child. As far as Anna could remember she had never had 5 to speak an angry word to the girl.

“Mrs. Bond,” went on Mr. Hawkins, “told me that you scolded(责备) her daughter yesterday afternoon.”

“Scolded?” cried Anna. “I certainly didn’t do that. 6 not in school.” She added honestly.

Mrs. Bond’s 7 is that Janet was a little late back to school in the afternoon. She said she set out from home a little late.

“Just a minute,” said Anna, beginning to 8. “She did come late, very late. I had marked her 9, of course. Then she 10 slowly in, when we’d started our paper-cutting, and I believe I said she was a nuisance(讨厌). She didn’t appear to hear, and was certainly quite 11.”

“A nuisance!” Mr. Hawkins couldn’t 12 it and asked, “You are sure you said nuisance?”

“I may not even have said that.” Anna replied, “I was not angry at all at that moment—13 I certainly didn’t scold her.”

“Mrs. Bond said that you called her child a ‘nuisance’. Is that true?”

“Indeed it isn’t,” said Anna. “The child—or the other—had 14 it up!”

After Anna’s explanation, Mr. Hawkins felt 15. “Just as I thought, my dear, but of course I had to make sure.”

When spring came to the city of Cleveland, Ohio, it did not change Gates Avenue, which was a short street. But it seemed long because it was so ugly that most of the families who lived there had very little money. Their houses had not been painted in many years. The street itself was ugly, too. It had no pavement(人行道) and no street light.

Most of the little girls in the school near Gates Avenue wore pretty new clothes. But the little girl from Gates Avenue wore the same dirty dress that she had worn all winter. It was probably the only dress she owned.

Her teacher signed(叹气). The little girl was so nice and always worked hard in school. But her face was dirty and her hair was untidy. One day the teacher said, "Will you wash your face and hair before you come to school tomorrow morning? Please do that for me."

The next morning the child's pretty face had been washed. Her hair was clean and tidy, too. Before she went home that afternoon, the teacher bought a bright blue dress and gave it to the little girl. The child took the present and hurried home as fast as she could.

When the little girl's father saw her in the new blue dress, he was surprised to find that he had a pretty little girl. When the family sat down to eat supper, he was even more surprised to find a tablecloth put on the table by her wife which the family had never used before. After supper the mother started to wash the floors and her husband went outside to repair the fence.

During the next week, the man next door watched the little girl's family's "clean-up". Then he started to paint his house for the first time in ten years.

A few months later Gates Avenue looked like a different street. There was pavement on the avenue and a street light on the corner. For the people who live in the homes, life has been made better.

Who knows what miracles(奇迹) may happen when a teacher gives a little girl a new blue dress?

二、阅读理解。

When I was about seven or eight years old, I once went into the barn (马厩) one evening where my dad was doing his daily work. I was surprised to see him wearing his hat backwards. It looked funny.

When I asked Dad why he put his hat backwards, he smiled and gave me an explanation. There was a large water tank for the cattle that had to be filled every day. Since it took a long time to finish the work, he would turn the water on and then go about doing other things like cleaning the barn or feeding the cattle, which usually cost him twenty minutes or even more time. The danger, of course, was that if he forgot to turn the water off, the tank would overflow and water would be wasted, which would make a mess.

Then he told me the reason why he had his hat turned around. When he finished other work and began to take off his work clothes, he would notice as he removed his hat that the visor (帽舌) was not where it was supposed to be. This would remind him that the water was still running. Then he would go back to the barn and turn it off.

I have seen my dad develop many other systems over the years. And I will never forget how helpful and valuable they are. Some may have even been life – saving.

Sometimes, people may forget some things. So they will easily make mistakes though they may try their best. Using some good methods can help them operate more effectively. In order not to blame others or yourself for mistakes, you'd better look for some ways, whether they are funny or not, as long as they will help you in achieving what you truly wish to do.

This could be utility, and as simple as a checklist. Now I've used a lot of them, such as putting my car keys in the same place every time. It could be having someone check your work and it could also be a computer program that helps to find out whether your calculations are correct.

- ( D ) 1. The author found his father's behavior funny because _____.
 A. he had never been to the barn before
 B. his father's hat was different from others
 C. the horses played some tricks
 D. his father wore the hat in a strange way
- ( B ) 2. What would the author's father NOT do in the barn according to the passage?
 A. Clean the barn. B. Feed the chicken.
 C. Give food to the cows. D. Fill the large water tank.
- ( A ) 3. The word “utility” probably means “_____” in the passage.
 A. practical B. difficult C. meaningless D. avoidable
- ( B ) 4. What can we know about the author's father?
 A. His job was to develop new systems in the barn.
 B. The systems he invented were always very useful.
 C. He developed as many systems as possible to help people.
 D. He always taught the author how to make proper checklists.
- ( D ) 5. The best title of the passage could be “_____”.
 A. My Funny Dad B. Knowledge in Barn
 C. A Good Cat Can Catch a Healthy Rat D. Keep a Checklist in Your Mind

Would you like to have a brother or a sister?

Years ago this might sound i 1 to many people. But since 2015 with the end of China's “one-child policy”, this can happen now. All Chinese couples are allowed to have t 2 children. That means many Chinese children, i 3 you, may have siblings (兄弟姐妹) in the future. But what would life be like if you g 4 up with a brother or a sister? “Having a sibling can prevent children from bad feelings such as loneliness and f 5,” said Laura Padilla-Walker, a professor of family research from Brigham Young University. “Siblings give kids something that parents can't.” You may not feel lonely at home any more because there is someone to p 6 with you. You can also s 7 secrets with him or her.

But children with siblings also have to learn to c 8 their feelings, said Laura. You can't enjoy things by yourselves, such as parents' l 9, toys, the bathroom and the TV. There is also something u 10 such as competition, arguments and even fights.
